

22nd December - O King of the Nations- Angry Purple Squirrel

It's hard work being a legend in your own life-time. I am a purple squirrel, we do exist, although we are very rare! Lots of people think that our grey colouring has been changed to purple by chemicals left lying about in the environment. Needless to say this is a very plausible idea, given how careless humans are apt to be. One possibility is that we've chewed something like printer ink and groomed it into our fur. It's probably no coincidence that nobody has claimed to have seen a baby purple squirrel. It's not very likely that we would have been born like this, and anyway, I'm not very keen on being described as a mutant. In fact, I must say that I'm not altogether thrilled about this whole purple thing. Animals have colouring for a reason you know, we are adapted to our environment and don't appreciate losing our camouflage. You might think that this is cute or funny but you don't have to live with it! All in all you lot aren't the best neighbours to share a planet with, which is a shame, as I understand that you were put here to be helpful.